

Cincinnati TechHire CodeSprint

Competition

Want to Jump-start a Tech Career?

Show off your skills to employers

Greater Cincinnati currently has over 1,500 unfulfilled IT jobs; employers ranging from startups to Fortune 500s are actively seeking ways to fill these roles. Last year, the White House named Cincinnati one of the Nation's TechHire communities, recognizing collaboration between employers, workforce development groups, educators, and community leaders.

Our results: last year over 100 individuals from non-IT backgrounds were hired after taking intensive, short-term training programs, like coding boot-camps.

What is the CodeSprint?

<http://techhire.org/community/cincinnati>

HackerRank is hosting a free TechHire CodeSprint for students, job seekers, and companies in TechHire communities across the country. Starting Saturday, participants will have 48 hours to solve 8 coding challenges ranging from basic programming to advanced algorithms. At the end of the event, top coders will receive cash awards from a $10K prize pool. Participants will be connected to job prospects across the country through shared performance data. TechHire Cincinnati will conduct a local event hosted by Thrive, with additional cash prizes and awards for local participants. Several community leaders will be at the Kick-off on Saturday morning to formally welcome the participants.

Who Can Participate?

Register Now ▶ http://codesprint.eventbrite.com

Current/recent college students, training program participants, and self-taught coders should compete.

The CodeSprint provides a great opportunity to show their skills, connect with our employer partners, and is especially relevant for individuals seeking internships, starting positions, and career advancement.
